El contexto es importante cuando se considera como decir esto. Si está usted en una tienda de zapatos, probablemente se diría "quisiera unos zapatos...para correr/trabajar etc.". El subjuntivo es importante aquí porque quieres zapatos pero no te encontrarás zapatos por cierto. También, yo pienso que no es necesario decir "para mí". Es un hecho que están para tí, a menos que digas que no sea el caso. De lo contrario, se puede decir que "estoy buscando zapatos...". Hasta que yo sé, esto estaría adecuado también. Una nota: "quisiera" es la manera más común (y bien educado) para pedir cosas cuando se come en restaurante, o se hace las compras... ¡Espero que te ayude eso! The context is important when one considers how to say this. If you are in a shoe-shop, one would probably say "I would like some shoes....for work or for running etc.". The subjunctive is important here because you would like to have some shoes, but it's not certain that you will find any. Also, I think that it isn't necessary to say "for me". This is taken as fact, unless you say it isn't the case. Otherwise, one could say that "I am looking for shoes...". As far as I know, this would also be appropriate. Note: "I would like" (subjunctive form) is the most common and polite way of asking for things when shopping, eating out at a restaurant etc. Hope that helps! Mi libro. My book. If books is plural change it to "mis libros. Mí (with the accent is "me") it is used like this. Esta enchilada es para mí. This enchilada is for me. Me also means "me" but it is used as a direct or indirect object. Pablo me vio en la calle. Pablo saw me in the street. (direct object) Pablo me dio un regalo. Pablo gave me (to me) a present. (indirect object) I have simplified this as much as possible. It is still better to learn grammatical terms as my wonderful friend Bosquedero has suggested. The point of grammar regarding "gustar" is another matter. On this site we have great teachings on various points of grammar. You will find the links at the bottom of the main webpage. updated Dec 11, 2015edited by Daniela2041posted by Daniela2041I do not know if you meant mi or mí- but the accent makes a difference. Me is the pronoun when you are using it as a direct object, an indirect object, or a pronominal/reflexive object. Mí is used when it is the object of a preposition. Mi is a possessive adjective, and can become mis if the noun it is affecting is plural. A mí me gusta manejar mi coche. Mí- because it follows a preposition ("a")- to me, in my case. Me- indirect object of gustar. It is pleasing to me. Mi- it is my car. This is all opposed to "yo" which is the subject pronoun. If you do not understand these grammar terms, I would suggest learning them. updated Dec 11, 2015edited by bosquedero posted by bosquederoBrowse faster in the app!Get the Word of the Day EmailSpanishDictionary.com is the world's most popular Spanish-English dictionary, translation, and learning website.Copyright © 2025 Curiosity Media, Inc., a division of IXL LearningSpanishDictionary.com is the world's most popular Spanish-English dictionary, translation, and learning website.Ver en español en inglés.comTranslationConjugationVocabularyLearn SpanishGrammarWord of the DayAbout UsPrivacyTermsSite MapHelpContact Us Spanish to EnglishPossible Results:See the entry formi.See the entry formí.RELATED ARTICLESPossessive Adjectives in Spanishmi()An adjective is a word that describes a noun (e.g., the big dog).adjectivea. my Ahora es mi turno, después será el tuyo.Now it's my turn, afterwards it'll be yours.A masculine noun is used with masculine articles and adjectives (e.g., el hombre guapo, el sol amarillo).masculine nouna.
